FISHING AT WEST POINT

West Point is a 16,000 acre U.S. Army installation located in southern New York State. Located almost entirely in Orange County, it lies about 40 miles north of New York City. As a military installation and service academy its primary goal is the education and training of U.S. Military Academy cadets as well as serving as a training facility for visiting military personnel.

Though the main mission of the West Point Military Reservation is a military one, West Point's natural resources also provide a host of excellent recreational opportunities, including fishing. Military and civilians alike have fished on what is now West Point since before its inception. Today, that tradition continues as over 8,500 acres are available for eligible individuals to hunt.

This brochure seeks to inform readers about fishing on the West Point Military Reservation including access and eligibility; types of game fish and permits available; safety and regulations and more.

However, this brochure is by no means a comprehensive guide. For more information on hunting in New York State, please visit the website of the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation at www.dec.ny.gov. And for more information on hunting on the West Point Military Reservation please visit the West Point iSportsman website.

West Point's iSportsman website can be found at:

<https://westpoint.isportsman.net>

This site is now the MAIN place to buy West Point fishing permits. In-person sales have been discontinued with one exception. See "Campground Fishing Permits" section.
